W^E DO not wish to make this dedication of our yearbook an elaborate one; it is a very simple expression of our deep gratitude and affection for Irving J. Goldberg. His kindness, his warmth, and his humor have endeared him to us. For four years he has guided and criticized us, not with the cold formality of a grade adviser, but quite simply as a friend. Long after we leave Weequahic he will remain an inspiration. As a small token of our appreciation, we dedicate to him our yearbook, the Legend of January, 1944.

TO THE CLASS OF JANUARY, 1944

● At this hour of your graduation the world has already entered into what the ancient prophet Joel called "the valley of decision." Mighty days are before mankind; and I know that you will play an important role in them, inspired by the hope of establishing justice, equality, freedom, and fraternity everywhere.

THE TRIBE

TO OUR HOMEROOM TEACHERS

● The position of Homeroom Teachers is a peculiar one. They must stand between their classes and the world. It is they who draw to themselves the babel of notices, announcements, nurse's slips, appointment slips, and the innumerable messages which call us to the varied duties of our high school days. They are the perfect go-betweens. Sometimes we wondered if they knew what we thought of them. Perhaps it was just as well they did not. Yet now as we have almost closed the door on our homeroom days we realize that they have ever been our friends, and we want to say before we go that we appreciate all they have suffered with and from us.

FOREWORD

From olden times endured the lore
Of a People who went o'er
The mountains to the Sky,
So they might ask Him why
The fourth year hath more hours,
And why above the other three it towers.

The quill which wrote the myths of Greece,
The bard who sang The Golden Fleece
Bequeathed to us a heritage dear,
The explanation of Leap Year:
Yarns of how the Scottish peer and Irish Saint
Did create that Year so quaint;
Ancient tales of women rude
Pursuing men of pulchritude.
An Indian myth, in theory unique:—
A warrior staunch and a maiden meek.
To us 'tis more than tales of yore
And more than customs heretofore.
It means the joy of this Leap Year:
 Graduation almost here,
 Academic cap and gown;
 Ceremony and renown.
Means '48 and Leap Years thence,
Thinking in terms of future tense.

"Sir," said they to Him,
"Why?"
"Fools!" to them He did reply,
"Hast thou never heard of math?"
And assumed an air of wrath.

DEDICATION TO SERVICEMEN

● In years past, after leaving the "reservation" was a term filled with the joy of college life. Today, for our young men, it holds grim implications. In a war-beset world, the young men of Weequahic, like those of schools the country over, are going off to fight. Several have left the reservation even before graduation. We are grateful for what they are doing, and wish them the very best of luck until "Johnny comes marching home again."

HENRY VAN DYKE

TRIBAL LORE

LEGEND OF

By the fire one autumn evening
Once, when I was but a child,
Ceased an old man from his nodding,
Told me of a wonderous tale.
Autumn nights, he thickly mumbled,
When the air is pricked by frost,
Bring to mind the strangest legend,
Bring an oft-recounted legend,
Bring to mind the recollections
Of a long remembered past.
Many moons ago, he told me,
Lived the tribe of the Weequahi
In a wigwam called Weequahic,
In a wigwam on the hill.
Many moons of joy they lived there,
Four full years of joy abode there:
Trod the path up to the wigwam,
Padded feet trod up the hill.
Lived there through the seasons' cycles:
When the yellow leaf of autumn

Drifted through the tangy air;
When the north wind swiftly racing
Sang a sharp song round the hill;
When the spring's expectant breathing
Raised the green grass on the rill.
Happy then were the Weequahi,
Labored well beside the wigwam,
Danced with joy around the wigwam,
Scarcely dreamed that it could end.
But beyond the great world called them,
Called the tribe of the Weequahi;
Nightly beat the speaking tom-toms,
Broke the peace upon the hill.
Many tribes were on the warpath,
Many roads outside awaited,
Here they could not stay forever:
Many things demanded doing.
So at last they would be parted,
After four years would be parted,
Pondered they about tomorrow—

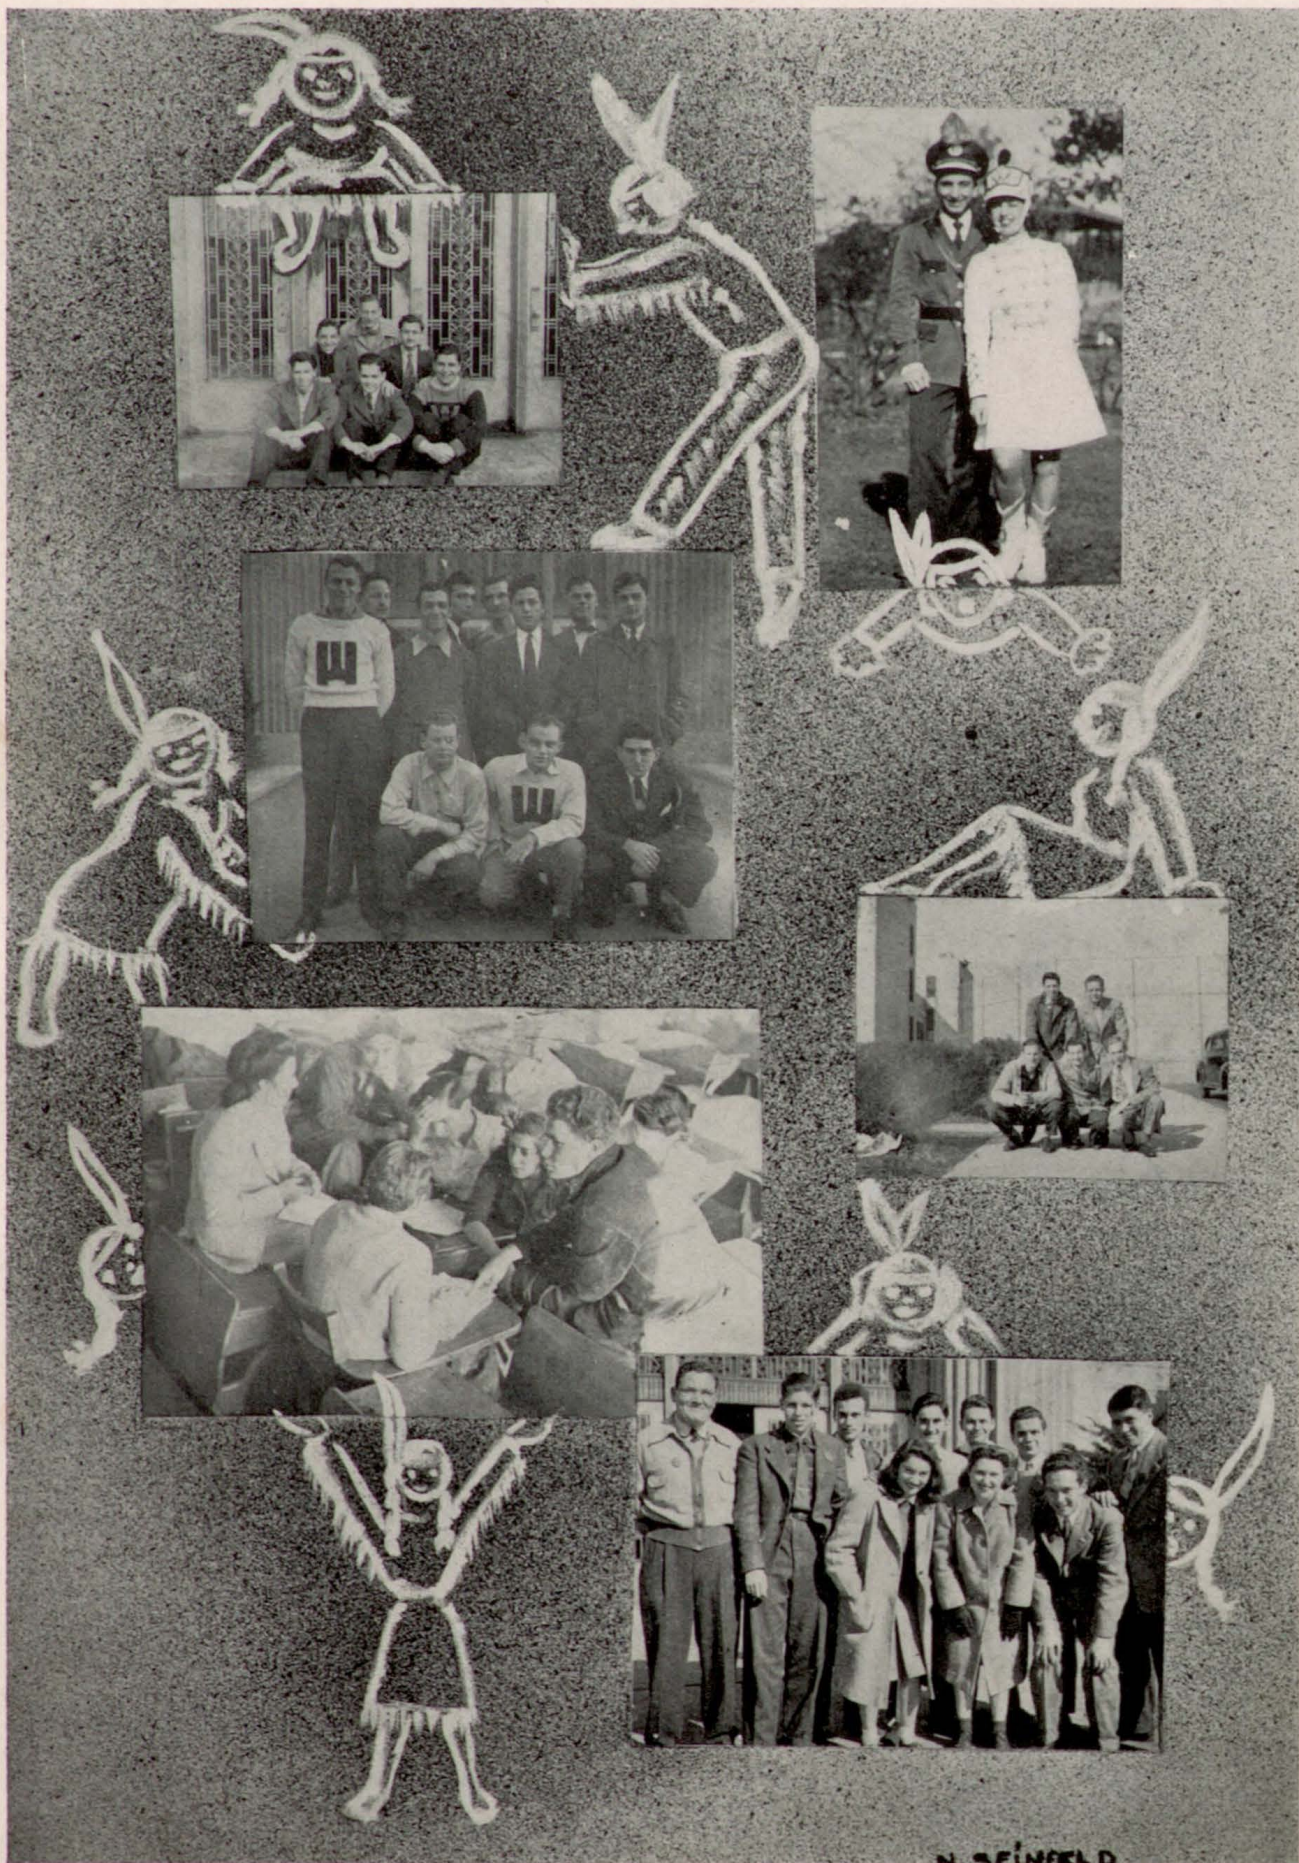

WEEQUAHIC

Where would four years hence unearth them?
Heavy then with parting's sadness,
With past years of joy within them,
With the mystery of tomorrow,
Told they the Weequahic saga;
Then they went into the forest,
Felled a sapling, soft for carving,
Carved on it four years' dear message,
Raised the totem on the hill.
There they raised a new-faced god,
Two-faced god to guard the totem,
One face viewing yesterday,
Four full years of joy and sorrow;
Other looking to tomorrow,
Seeing what no man can say.
Then they gathered round the fire,
All the tribe of the Weequahi,
Gathered there for tears and laughter
And the parting of the ways.
Till the blinding ball of fire

Rose above the clean horizon,
All the tribe of the Weequahi
Vowed a never-broken vow:
Never to forget the wigwam,
Never to forget the hill,
Always to recall their brethren,
Keep their mem'ries burning still.
Never to forget their cycle,
Or the two-faced totem god
Watching over the Weequahi,
Watching back and forward four years.
Made the tribe a final promise:
In their bosom would they carry
To the earth's remotest corners
Memories of Weequahic's saga;
Tell it to their little children,
By the fire on autumn evenings,
Tell it to their children's children—
Tell them—"The Weequahic Legend."

AL SEINFELD

THE FOURTH CYCLE—1940-1944

OUR leap started the minute we strode triumphantly up the broad, front staircase of Hawthorne Avenue Grammar School and continues to the second when we shall slowly, sadly march down the narrow steps on either side of the stage of the Weequahic High School Auditorium.

It was during the leap year of '40 that more than three hundred of us settled in a novel city of rooms, schedules, periods, and subjects located in the singular country of The Sagamores, The O.B.A., The Annex News, and The Student Council. While clubs, dances, assemblies, bus rides, shows, and exams taught us what high school life was like, the first year slipped by before anyone had a chance to regret or rejoice in its departure.

At length, we became the second class from the Annex "to join the larger fellowship of Weequahic students at the main building," as Mr. Coleman said. From our home rooms in the lunchroom and the Chancellor building, we directed our search through the hallways for those time-honored mythical places, the swimming pool and the elevator. Amid other greetings, were our press notices (from the CALUMET) which offered official welcome and referred to us as "the semi-annual migration." That was the term we watched our basketballers go through their first undefeated season, and that was also the time our school was evaluated. Remember?

After experiencing our first "Melnik Extravaganza"—the school's Eighth Annual Revue, we entered the 3B grade with a plentiful supply of ambition. There were class officers to be elected, a Class Council to be formed, and class dues to be paid. Following came dances, another Music Revue, and heated O.B.A. elections. The next year we watched our band march in their victory parades, and we saw the first members of the faculty leave for active service in the armed forces.

In December of 1942, we held our first social. "The 3A Victory Dance" it was called. Well, it wasn't so bad! Our class did its part as the school went through the salvage drive, the Minute Man banner campaign, the organization of the Victory Corps, and another average (Weequahic High School level) football season.

It was when we entered the Senior B grade that the feeling of superiority seized us. While the conceit crept in, we were kept occupied with other pressing problems, such as extended physical training periods, colleges, the Army and Navy, and points and credits. We had little time to stop and think of our waning high school days. One sunny morning, the Torch ceremony startled most of the class by reminding us that three and one-half years had passed since we had entered Weequahic, and that our remaining weeks were numbered.

Voting again, we elected Kleinman over Reich for a third and final term as class president. The 4B-4A Hop given for us, our Prom, our Torch Day, the day of Recognition, and our Legend brought the last flight of steps into view.

Now, in the leap year '44, at the height of high school days, we stand prepared for our leap into the next quadrennium.

1940-1944-1948

Our eyes were wide with wonder;
Our lips let out a sigh;
Our hearts were filled with pride and joy;
We were entering Weequahic High.

Our high school days are over.
My, how the years did fly!
We've done our work and had our fun;
We're leaving Weequahic High.

Our dreams will all come true;
And as the years pass by,
We'll think of all our happy days
And remember Weequahic High.

HELLO, Brandon? Get two rewrite men ready. Hello?—No, I don't want the spaceliner crash on the front page—keep it open. Hello?—No, I don't care if she buried herself alive; keep the whole front page open for the election. Hey Charlie, got pictures of both of them? Frank, send Henley down to headquarters—give him a photographer! Brandon, cut out the "Jupiter Reporting" column. Miss Jay, send me some aspirin and get Uranus on the teleray and tell Johnson to get here fast. Tell him to take the Inter-Heaven Express and change at Pleiades Junction to the Earth-bound Local. He can make the strata-ferry from Labrador that way. Hey, you over there, how about getting your human interest yarns; you know your job. Hello, yeah, yeah, yeah, No! Hello?—

And so it went once every four years, and so I went to get my human interest yarns. I knew my job. For forty-four years I have been scouring the polling places on Election Day for human interest. I remember 1948 when I had just graduated from college, I saw some of my old friends taking advantage of their newly acquired right of franchise. Jerry Gohd was so excited manipulating the voting machine for the very first time that, when he left the curtained enclosure, he found he had forgotten to vote. Robert Smith, Seymour Gerber, Robert Rothschild, Harold Isserman, and Stanley Denburg thought it was a paying proposition, so they tried to get in for a child's price. Charitable Carol Biscobel, Ruth Keshen, Seena Cohen, Miriam Hornstein, Norman Bierbaum, Stanley Slavin, Jack Simon, and Phil Kunzman gave George Frank a penny when he offered them each a Willkie button. The popular new M.G.M. singing starlets, Shirley Barden, Elaine Zeitlin, and Shirley Yeager, were escorted from the polls by their publicity men, Abe Kaplowitz, Arnold Basen, and Elias Weiner. Murray Tucker, Edwin Brommer, Aaron Green, John Dietz, and Alvin Novick thought it appropriate to tell about their former work in the motion picture industry as employees of the Twentieth Century Fox. They had been ushers at Proctor's during the summer months.

The next Leap Year was 1952 and Election Day found me at the polls again. Just outside of the building seven baby carriages were on display, bearing gurgling tots who closely resembled Beatrice Kupperman, Ruth Wolfe, Marilyn Lewitt, Selma Davidowitz, Charlotte Berger, and Norma Spitalny. Norma's little Chauncy was dramatically caught in mid-air by Officer Milton Richlin, after falling out of his rolling residence. This incident attracted quite a crowd, including those cute Misses Phyllis Wechter, Rita Bean, Shirley Bennes, Paula Hauser, Roslyn Zucker- man, Phyllis Lacks, Betty Leibowitz, Rosalind Teitelbaum, Gloria Modlin, Miriam Les- nik, and Lillian Blake. But off they went in hot pursuit when handsome sailor Saul Weiss- man passed by.

The first persons to catch my attention at the next election were Arthur Katz, Irwin Sklon, Gerald Coopersmith, Irving Lerner, Eugene Kugel, Sam Stewart, Saul Telesnick, Milton Meyerson, and Malcolm Kirschner sporting the latest in—well, you could buy them at any one of Haft's Haberdashery Houses. The Chicago Bears' backfield—Herb Krautblatt, Jack Greengrove, Don Zadoff, and Ray Spingarn—were busy with the autograph hunters; but theatrically inclined Morton Poznack, Marilyn Ginsberg, Marcia Bud- dish, Sonia Ehrich, Phyllis Sieber, Erica Beim, Jerry Laubentracht, Jerome Reinfeld, and Eileen Sender were quite absorbed in a copy of "Cue." The four Rubins (Joyce, Judith, Martin, and Sidney) explained to Doris Prussian, Allen Sieshlotz, Edward Mark, and Katherine Pflieger that they weren't related.

1960 was the year when the great author, Ivan Manson's first book, "Dialectic Materialism" appeared. Murray Perlman, and Fay Friedman took first and second prizes in the nationwide contest "Why I Like Chipso," in twenty words or less. Gerry Alters and his band had made their first recording for Decca; and Shirley Polte, Sol Blatt, Anna Laudano, Norman Eggert, Mona Reisman, and Henry Medvin had been signed up with Weehawken Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. Richard Siegel and Norman Citron opened their new trans-oceanic airtaxi service. The history making passengers on the initial trip to Zanzibar, Africa, were Francis Tractman, Bette Trimmer, Bernard Weislow, Esther Rosenberg and Pilot Bernard Borrus. At election time, Kleinman vs. Reich was the setup for district leader. Dave Ravin had quite a time proving to clerk Ben Tepperman that he was an American citizen. During a brief recess of their weekly Mah-Jong battle and neighborhood forum, Freda Kamm, Harriet Katz, Norma Kraemer, Regina Kraus, Marilyn Goldberg, Blanche Isicoff, Evelyn Hantman, and Dorothy Horowitz all marched into the polls, voted, and resumed their brawl at the home of Henrietta Ring.

In 1964 work on the tricontinental bridge from Lisbon to Casablanca to Miami, commenced under the supervision of Stanley Handelman and Herbert Quint. Herb Rappaport became universally famous by rocketing to the moon. In August, Clifford Noll, Frank Miller, Hubert Frisch, and George Dessauer did for the first time what millions of Earthmen now do every day—rocketed to Mars. When the first contingent of Martians visited Earth that summer, the Chamber of Commerce of Newark, which included Dave Schulman, Edwin Wiernick, Anthony Rastelli, Charles Ravell, Seymour Schachner, Edwin Lucker, Irene Hirshowitz, Mildred Horowitz, Ethel Felcher, Mae Fishman, Doris Flagg and Charlotte Flaxman, was given the honor of presenting them with keys to the Earth. Among the celebrities at the polls that year were: members of the Irving Silberg Archeological Society—Paul Fine, Leonard Cohen, Joseph Schulman, Seymour Rosen and Irving Schanerman—just back from an Egyptian expedition which preceeded their shoplifting safari at R. H. Macy & Company; Cartoonists Arthur Gauss and Jerry Rosen- feld, creators of L'il Abner's Little Abner; and Scientist Herman Abrams, who after seven years of painstaking research declared that exactly 50% of married people are women.

For the past few elections I had gone to the polls in my helicopter, but in 1968 I travelled by flying belt. At a 900 foot altitude above Kresge's, I passed Corrine Siblerman, Eleanor Lafchuk, Shirley Burns, Hannah Greenberg, Betty Greidinger, Florence Crnin, Alice Thomas, Dorothy Seidman, and Selda Lipshutz flying in a neat echelon formation. The powerful political machine of Bernard Budish was well represented at the polls by Charles Levine, Arthur Eisenberg, Paul Brodtkin, Melvin Kaden, and Leo Torres, who came to look the situation over, as well as hand out a few cigars. Within two minutes Daniel Gildenberg, Irwin Shoneman, Jerome Berman, Harold Davis, and Ben Boydman were seen taking the residents out of the south side of Newark. That night the sound of fire engines brought me to the home of Accountant Irving Kessler, who had fallen asleep with a lighted cigarette in his hand. Among the helmeted men on the hook and ladder truck were Bernard Karp, Jerome Hirshenson, Arthur Abend, Herman Lubin, and Martin Fish. Energetic, youthful Governor Charles Redish raced madly to the scene of action, followed by State Senators Joseph Forthuber, Franklyn Kolber, George Davis, Richard Waton, Jack Mitnick, and State Alcoholic Beverage Commissioner Calvin Axel. Dr. Eugene Portuguese and nurses Ellen Conovitz, Ruth Beller, Roslyn Diamond, and Rona Singer also appeared at the fire, but a squirt of neighbor Eugene Gergely's garden hose saved the day (and Kessler's bed).

In 1972, Gloria Buechler made her first appearance in a straight dramatic role. The New Jersey Federation of Women Voters, which boasted of members such as Myra Drazin, Dorothy Doyle, Blanche Eisen, Harriette Goldberg, Janice Selwyn, Shirley Gold- farb, Frieda Samilson, Elaine Lonoff, Marcia Herman, and Doris Stone, nominated Betty Weiss as candidate for United States Senator and Janet Goldblatt for one of their representatives. Back from a three month's vacation at the swanky Nebulae Hotel in Neptune were Stanley Hudzik, Irwin Jordan, Harry Silverman, Abbot Steinberg, Philip Sturm, and Sanford Spiegel.

When I reached fifty years of age—that was in 1976, sixteen years ago—I at last realized that I was no longer a spry youngster; but Norman Fast and Harry Dorfman were voted “the two best dressed young men in America.” The famous Kleinman-Reich debates were held that year, and Betty Simon's society column originated. The Daughter's of the Russian Revolution gave honorary memberships to Red Cross leaders Marcia Eisenberg, Shirley Steinman, Selma Spiegel, Esther Zaentz, Rose Berger, Honore Steigler, Edith Gallup, and Mildred Kaplan. The Women's Auxiliary Committee of Newark, officers of which were Ruth Lubetkin, Miriam Blaustein, Renee Schantz, Nettie Eiser, Helene Gehl, and Marilyn Fischer, voted early that day in order not to miss a lecture featuring dress designers Marion Schlenger and Norman Seinfeld.

Twelve years ago, an unfounded rumor to the effect that free dishes would be given to all voters, brought a flock of women to the polls. Housewives Florence Balshan, Doris Feld, Esther Levy, Marilyn Neuss, Blanche Ostrowsky, Ruth Kalb, Hannah Vinokgois, Dorothy Zorskie, Joyce Klein, and Florence Altschul all were there. Quite suddenly a police escort, led by Chief Robert Bonda and Captains Hyman Wildhorn and Arnold Cohen entered, followed by wily old tycoon, E. Robert Eber, creator of the now fabulous Eber fortune; Stanley Leezenbaum, Chairman of the Senate Interplanetary Affairs Committee; Edwin Reich, famous for his daring publication of Martin Staenberg's book, “How to Win From Friends and Influence People”—Unabridged; Irwin Krupnick, Vice-President of United States Zinc; and Richard H. Hoenig, chief photographer of “Reader's Digest.”

In 1984, the candidacy of Bernard Kleinman and Jerome Reich for Governor of New Jersey attracted another flock of women. Present were wives of many prominent Newark citizens, including the former Misses Ada Skuratofsky, Lucille Slotnick, Gloria Flaster, Ruth Feier, Adele Lizzack, Ruth Stellof, and Florence Goldsmith. Professor William Karlen, head of the Chemistry Department at Harvard University, was quite mechanical in quickly voting and departing. At the door, however, he was mobbed by Herbert Schmieder, Joseph Montano, Lawrence Portnow, Gerald Moshinsky, Irwin Weinstein, and Mark Siebert who all screamed in unison, “Professor, your pants!!!”

The last election was in 1988. Present and still looking as young and as lovely as if they were fifty were Shirley Spieler, Helen Steigman, Gerda Suesskind, Rita Mager, Rose Mitnick, Kay Scheffick, Joan Rauscher, Shirley Bach, Gertrude Ezarsky, Claire Pinnas, Evelyn Abramowitz, Norma Weiss, and Viola Bongo. George Weiss and Edwin Tillou, owners of the largest chain of super markets in America, were there, as well as the Metropolitan's favorite “Aida,” Harriet Ostroger; and hat creators Sally Brandt, Corrine Blum, and Sharon Gootman. Just beating the closing time of the election polling place, was woman commentator, author, lecturer, housewife, reporter critic, as well as grandmother of triplets—Shirley Gerber. Partly hidden by a copy of Editor Ed Brenner's newspaper, “The Daily Loafer,” socialites Sydelle Applebaum, Doris Bartsch, Rheda Neibart, Lorraine Kramer, Thelma Weissman, and Adrienne Gelbond were fascinatedly absorbed by the article, “Tycoon Eber Not Guilty of Tax Evasion.” Reading the comics on the other side of the paper, were bewhiskered Alvin Austin, Robert Kaufman, Herbert Krugman, Frank Vanderstreet, and Robert Schnack.

Here it is election day again, and here I am going to gather some human interest yarns for the “News.” I know my job. For forty-four years I have been doing this. Why, I remember as clearly as yesterday when in 1959 I was——

LEGENDS

LEGEND OF LEAP YEAR

When leap years come and leap years go,
We often wonder why, and so
To show to you in verses witty,
We have composed this little ditty.

Now it all started long ago,
When girls, with dried-up faces,
Would try like mad to get a man
Twined in their embraces.

You see, it was the custom then
That men do the proposing.
A girl once got a swell idea—
Started in supposing.

"Supposing there could come a time
When we girls had the right;
Suppose I speak to good St. Pat,
Maybe he can see the light."

St. Pat agreed and spoke his piece,
A saintly voice from heaven,
He said that girls could have one year;
One in every seven.

"One in every seven," she cried,
And started for the door;
"Okay, you win," St. Patrick said,
"One in every four."

A LEGEND

EVERY morning when the sun rose in the land of the Weequahic Indians, it seemed to guard the portals of the day like a great orange sentinel. It was not like the brilliant yellow sun which reigned over the heavens during the light hours, nor like the blood red sun which, at the end of day, offered up to the Great Spirit the preceding hours. This flaming orange disc jealously protected the people of the Great Spirit; and it came to be regarded as the judge of his people, burning furiously if the Great Spirit was displeased and reassuringly if he was content.

But one morning a strange thing happened. The great orange disc had risen joyously and was sending out millions of dancing beams which flitted through all the land. There was one beam, however, which was strong and piercing and shone directly on the lodge of a young warrior. And then—this solitary, solemn beam flashed and flamed suddenly and shortened, shortened, shortened, and finally formed into a counterpart of its origin. In awe, the young warrior knelt and from the great orange disc came these words, "You are now the guardian of my people. During many risings have I watched you, and you have shown yourself to be worthy of my trust. This small disc shall be your guide and through it you shall inspire regard. Use it wisely and never shall it be taken from you. Go and administer justice, Sagamore."

LEGEND OF THE CALUMET

DURING the night while a hunting party of twenty braves of the Weequahi tribe slept peacefully in the Great Bear Cave, a band of the hated Leni-Lenapi silently crept upon them and killed many of them. The Weequahi were not a race who accepted a slap across the face without lifting a hand to protect themselves. By next nightfall, every able-bodied warrior had made himself ready for the war-path. Then they stole into the forest prepared to avenge the death of their comrades.

For many years fierce and bloody battles raged between the Weequahi and the Leni-Lenapi. Only when a large portion of both sides had been exterminated, did the senior chief of the Leni-Lenapi, Okinai, approach Chief Nopatsis of the Weequahi.

After a short council they agreed to end the warfare between the two tribes. In view of the fact that the attack had been launched on a false assumption, the Weequahi invited the Leni-Lenapi to help celebrate their next festival, due in eight moons.

On the appointed night, the Leni-Lenapi made their visit. Before the dancing and feasting was to begin, the councils of both tribes came together by request of Chief Nopatsis. It was a most significant symbol when Nopatsis brought out the tribe's sacred calumet, took his puffs, and passed the traditional peace-pipe on to the delegation of Leni-Lenapi. They decided to dedicate a memorial to the lives lost in the unfortunate incident. They agreed to rename the cave where the initial assault took place, "The Calumet," in commemoration of the peace that followed. Each year both tribes would pick one brave, distinguished by his superiority in picture-writing, to keep a chronicle of the important events on the wall of the "Calumet" cave.

To this day, "The Calumet" records the history of the Weequahi.

LEGEND OF THE LUNCHROOM

MANY moons ago, in the land of the Indian, the starving tribe of the Weequahi were gathered about their Chief. "We must have food," he said. "Go my men and bring us food that we may live." "Ugh," replied the braves, "We go." After jitterbugging about the tribal fire to get their morale up, they left, promising to return quickly.

At last the hunters returned, bringing food to the starving tribe. The squaws had already prepared the cauldrons and cutlery, and as they examined the meat one said, "Ugh, venison make fine lunchmeat." "Not enough potatoes," said a young maiden. "Ha," leered an older, experienced one—"Little water fix that—we have 'nuff to go around." And each busied herself with a particular task, but all were concerned over the fact that there might not be enough food for all.

The savory odors began to permeate the vicinity and those hungry people grew noisier. In vain did their Chief try to quiet them. Finally, when the food had been placed before the drooling tribe, the Chief raised his hand and gave the signal to commence. At once the horde thundered down on the food—papooses were trampled, pottery was broken, and even the few staunch braves who were to keep order were in danger. It was every one for himself. Pushing, elbowing, screaming, they made a dash for the food.

It is quiet now in the tribe of the Weequahi. Now and then a satisfied grunt is heard from a satiated feaster. The Weequahi have eaten their watery potatoes and lunchmeat, and enjoyed it. They have drunk watery soup and reveled in it.

That is how the great famine was averted—and even today the tribe celebrates that triumph of long ago, every day.

For each day, when the Chief gives his signal, the hungry hordes once again rush to the food. In the melee, even the Sagamores are not safe. And, even as before, the Weequahi eat their watery potatoes and lunchmeat and drink their thin soup. And, even now, some lesser Chief will attempt to keep order at the eating place of the tribe—in vain.

THE WEEQUAHIC DEB

Her lipstick is very, very deep,
Her eyes show that she needs some sleep,
Her nails are painted oh, so red,
And a bunch of flowers adorns her head.
She'll let her lunch consist of cokes,
And always wants to hear more jokes.
And that my friends, is the little rhyme,
Of the Weequahic girl, of the present time.

A LEGEND

Many, many moons ago in a kingdom by the sea
A tribe there lived in peaceful ways, called the Weequahi,
They were a proud people, loyal and full of pep,
Squaws were pretty, braves were strong—they were really hep.
There was one, among these braves, whose actions did not jibe,
“Lightning” was his moniker, this ‘Black Sheep’ of the tribe.
His manners were atrocious, his behavior worser still;
The “Weequahi” urged their chieftain to put him thru the mill.
Chief Weequahic called the boy in, and said, “Now listen son,
My warriors have called my attention to all the harm you’ve done.
You’ll have to mend your ways, my boy, you’ll never find a mate.”
Thus the chieftain spoke to ‘Lightning,’ the tribe’s P-38.
Throughout the years this custom’s grown, right on down the ages,
That young men be advised and trained by words of worldly sages.
Didn’t Mr. Greeley advise, with his thumbs stuck in his vest,
That all young men should grab a plane and hurry out due west?
Now in this year of ’44, our turn’s come this way.
To speak to our big “Chieftain” about our future days.
All the years we’ve waited, four to be specific,
The sweating of those four years, Boy, were they terrific!
And that my friends is how it all came to be,
That talk with Mr. Herzberg, for you, and you, and me.

THE WEEQUAHIC PLAY BOY

His jackets are long, and as sharp as can be,
His chain hangs low for all to see.
His tie is really of flashy print,
His socks are so that you have to squint.
His mind is always in a whirl,
His eyes just follow every girl.
And that my friends, is the little rhyme,
Of the Weequahic fellow, of the present time.

LEGEND OF SILENCE

MANY years ago the tribe of the Weequahi worshipped gods of silence. The Indian's footsteps were noiseless and his voice hushed. But occasionally the law of silence was violated, and then the unhappy culprit was sacrificed to appease the silent gods.

In later days, one of these sad victims raised his lament up to the skies as he awaited death:

Well I know that my horrible fate be a well-deserved one, and that for a dastardly crime such as mine none of the Fires Below burn hot enough to punish, and no earth has depth enough to let me bury the degradation of my shame! For I shattered that sacred, holy silence, unbroken since the beginning of Time; committed an iniquity against that citadel of learning, Weequahic!

I was treading down the stairs, where there is no silence, only a deep, slow, monotonous tramp, always rhythmic; all is order on the stairs. The melancholy sound beats in my ears. The beats grow louder and louder; they pound, they roar, they grind into my receptive ear. Turmoil twists my weak mental capacities, and frenzied, despairing, I hear what that mighty pounding is telling me—Algebra, History, English, Latin, Latin, English, History, Algebra, again, again, over again, to

The clicking and the clacking and the roaring of a train,
The pounding and the beating and the pouring of the rain,
Going over, and over, and over again,
Pounding and beating and wracking my poor brain—

Always there's that rhythm, will it never let me be!

For I'll go mad, I'll go mad, I'm going mad, don't you see!

In my pain there is terror,
In my brain I see my error—

And suddenly I stop—for someone has screamed!

There is silence—no, I have not dreamed—
The people are looking at somebody, who can it be?

They are staring at someone—why I think it is me!

And that is the story of my dastardly crime—

I had killed the silence unbroken by time!

THE LEGEND OF THE SWIMMING POOL

MANY, many moons ago when there were really "wigwams on the hill," Weequahic was ruled by Chief Betawatchout, a very malicious character. Instead of spending his time in making life better for his tribe, Betawatchout wasted hours thinking up practical jokes to play on people.

Betawatchout's favorite guinea pig and victim was a mild, meek soul named Gopheraswim, whose favorite pastime was swimming. Betawatchout arranged to have Gopheraswim told that a swimming pool had been built on top of the hill.

When Gopheraswim inquired about the pool, he was told, "You have to have a pass to get in. Wanna buy one?" Now, Gopher-aswim was just a poor Indian and couldn't afford a pass, but each day he became more and more anxious to see this great pool. Finally he managed to borrow enough wampum and with great joy rushed to the top of the hill.

At last Betawatchout's plan had succeeded! A triumphant Gopheraswim mounted the hill, carrying the swimming pool pass grasped tightly in his hands, only to be met by a horrible sight. There was no swimming pool!!

So, today, every once in a while the halls of Weequahic are haunted by a tragic figure, clutching a slip of paper in his hand, and pathetically inquiring of each passerby, "Wanna buy a pass?"

LEGEND OF TORCH DAY

Through the shadowed halls of Weequahic
Burns a torch forever bright:
Casts its glow on Indian faces
Radiant in its sacred light.

This the torch of Weequahic's honor
This the symbol carried high;
Turn your face up toward the beacon
As you see it carried by.

Six proud moons the tribal elders
Bear the torch of Weequahic high,
Keep the flame with deep affection
Till the passing of the torch.
Just before they leave the wigwam
March they down in long procession,
Give in solemn ceremony
Unto other hands the torch.
These shall bear it for their cycle,
Bear the beacon on their shoulders,
Tend the flame with proud affection
Till their passing of the torch.

This the torch of Weequahic's honor,
This the symbol carried high;
Turn your face up to the beacon
As you see it carried by.

SCROLL CALL

*At the lodge on winter evenings
Sat the scribe of the Weequahi,
Made the list of all the tribesmen,
Listed them with all their doings,
Gave them names they used in battle,
Told the secret of their prowess.
This the list on which he labored,
Now is spread for all to view:*

THE BELLES

With Apologies to
EDGAR ALLEN POE

I

Hear the autos with the belles—
Lovely belles!
What a world of gayety their comeliness foretells!
How they twinkle, twinkle, twinkle
At all the wondrous sights!
While the stars that oversprinkle
All the heavens seem to tinkle
With a feeling of delight;
Saying, "Fine, fine, fine!"
In a sort of Runic ryme,
To the cooing and the wooing of the belles.
Ah! The belles, belles, belles, belles.

II

Hear the scolding of the belles—
Robust belles!
The same old story, now their turbulency tells!
For the startled man in sight,
How they run with all their might!
"A man to seek! A man that's meek!"
That alone they shriek and shriek.
Oh! They sob and throb and roar!
What a horror they outpour.
Yet, the man, he fully knows
By the sobbing
And the throbbing,
How the danger ebbs and flows,
From the fervor and the clamor of the belles;
Of the belles, belles, belles, belles.

III

Do you see the sag'more belles—
Sag'more belles?
What a world of solemn thought their pompousness compels.
In the presence of their might,
How we shiver with affright
At the melancholy menace of their tone!
For every sound that floats
From the rust within their throats
Is a summons at the mercy of the Court!
They are neither man nor woman—
They are neither brute nor human—
They are Ghouls!
They are tools!
Oh! The belles, belles, belles, belles
A pity for these belles.

FINALE

*Congratulations, Senior Class!
It's fine to know, that now at last
You will be called upon to show
How much you've learned, and what you know;
And now you'll make your knowledge count,
As in your hopes you'll mount and mount,
Until you reach the very top
With dreams come true before you stop.
We wish the best of all for you,
Wherever you are, whatever you do.*

We Dedicate

this page to you,

the young men and women of the 4A class,

who are nobly serving or will serve in the defense of our country.

Four loyalties have you, as true Americans.

To these may you always be faithful.

To God above give reverence;

to your beloved country, staunch service;

to your fellow man, tolerance;

and

"To thine own self be true."

Best Wishes

All Out for Victory!

In these challenging days, requiring the utmost effort of every one of us to bring a complete victory to our country and a lasting peace to the world, the educational front—like the battle front and the production front—plays a vital role.

The year book today has a new and powerful motif: to reflect the school in war time.

Likewise, the year book today has a richer meaning than ever before: it is engraved with memories of friends and classmates who will be setting forth to all the fronts.

You rightfully expect a year book that will hold a proud place in the annals of your school, and for these reasons we dedicate our trained skills, our modern plant, and our experienced services to the fulfillment of your most discriminating requirements.
